

Sound advice to help ensure that the parenting choices you make are a reflection of

What Matters Most

When making parenting choices, it is always important to reflect on "What Matters Most". When to be firm and when to negotiate; when to address the needs of an individual child, and when to think of what effect this may have on the entire family. This audio series can help you make these difficult choices while building meaningful relationships with each of your children.

In this excellent parenting series, Rabbi Yakov Horowitz and Dr. Norman Blumenthal discuss the importance of maintaining a sense of balance and moderation when dealing with the complexities of raising children. Listening to these CD's will help parents raise self-confident young men and women who will be a credit to their families, and all of Klal Yisroel.

1. Raising Respectful and Spiritual Children
2. Developing Long-Lasting Relationships With Your Children
3. Building Self-Esteem In Your Children
4. Effective Discipline Techniques
